

REMITTANCE ADVICE GUIDE FOR OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

Apache Corporation strives to provide complete, accurate and timely data to our business associates. This guide is intended to provide you with an understanding of your check and the remittance advice as well as the information you would need to contact Apache should you have questions about your interest.

Your unique owner number

You have been assigned an exclusive owner number to distinguish you or your interest from Apache's other interest owners. When communicating with Apache, please include your owner number.

What do the codes mean?

Apache uses codes to distinguish the type of ownership interest an owner may have in a property and to identify the product sold in a transaction.

Each of the entries on the remittance is explained on the reverse of this guide.

WI01 designates working interest owners; OR01 designates overriding royalty owners; RI01 designates royalty interest owners; EX01 designates excess royalty owners, and BL01 designates Oklahoma SB168 royalty interest owners.

Payments from suspense

Occasionally, payments are held due to matters that create uncertainty as to ownership, such as a notice of death, change of address, transfer of property, assignment of interest or legal dispute. Payments due are accumulated and released when the matter affecting ownership has been resolved. Inquiries regarding suspense balances must be communicated in writing to Apache's Land Administration Department.

When to expect your checks

Your monthly check for both oil and gas is mailed on or before the last business day of the month. Oil revenue is normally paid within 30 days following the sales month, and gas revenue is normally paid within 60 days following the sales month. In many states, small payments are accumulated until the balance exceeds $100. Amounts over $10 but under $100 are paid annually. In all other cases, revenue payments will be made one month (that is, during the next check processing cycle) after Apache receives payment from purchasers or operators.

Negative balances

Previous overpayments to owners can result in a balance due Apache (a negative balance). In such an event, the negative balance will be carried forward until the owner account returns to a positive balance. At that time, a check will be issued.

Tax ID or Social Security number required

A valid tax identification number or Social Security number must be provided to Apache at the address shown below. If it is not, the Internal Revenue Service requires withholding of 31 percent of all revenues until the information is provided.

If you change your address

Please notify Apache promptly of any change in your mailing address. This notice must be in writing with your signature or the signature of your appointed agent. Please include your owner number, old address and new address, including the zip code. For your protection, address changes will not be accepted by telephone. Mail changes to:

Apache Corporation
Attention: Land Administration Department
2000 Post Oak Blvd., Suite 100

If you have other questions

For your convenience, an explanation of Apache's remittance advice is on the reverse side of this guide.

Inquiries about your payments should be sent to the attention of Owner Relations, while matters involving your interest should be sent to the attention of the Land Administration Department. Either type of request should be sent the above address. In order to assist you in the most timely and efficient manner, all requests must be made in writing. If it is necessary to speak with an Apache employee, please call (713) 296-6970. Please have your owner number, property number and the name of the well when you call.
